THE MYTH OF SAND

Many years ago, the Greek god Poseidon lived a castle in the depths of the sea.

Poseidon used to keep his treasures in a chest, behind his throne.

One day, while Poseidon was away from the castle, a curious octopus sneaked into the Throne Room.

The octopus saw the casket, opened it and took all treasures scattering them in the sea.

A few hours later Poseidon returned to the castle and when he found the empty casket, he went into a rage.

He took his trident and when he found his treasures, magically transformed them into sand.

So it was, since that day, we have sand.
